

Check what Ka had to say about the struggles faced during the server revamp by the staff and come along as she takes us through the process of planning and executing the new changes.

(...)Last time that we spoke to you, you mentioned recovering from a knee injury(...)

(...)How did you manage to juggle the changes during the holidays?

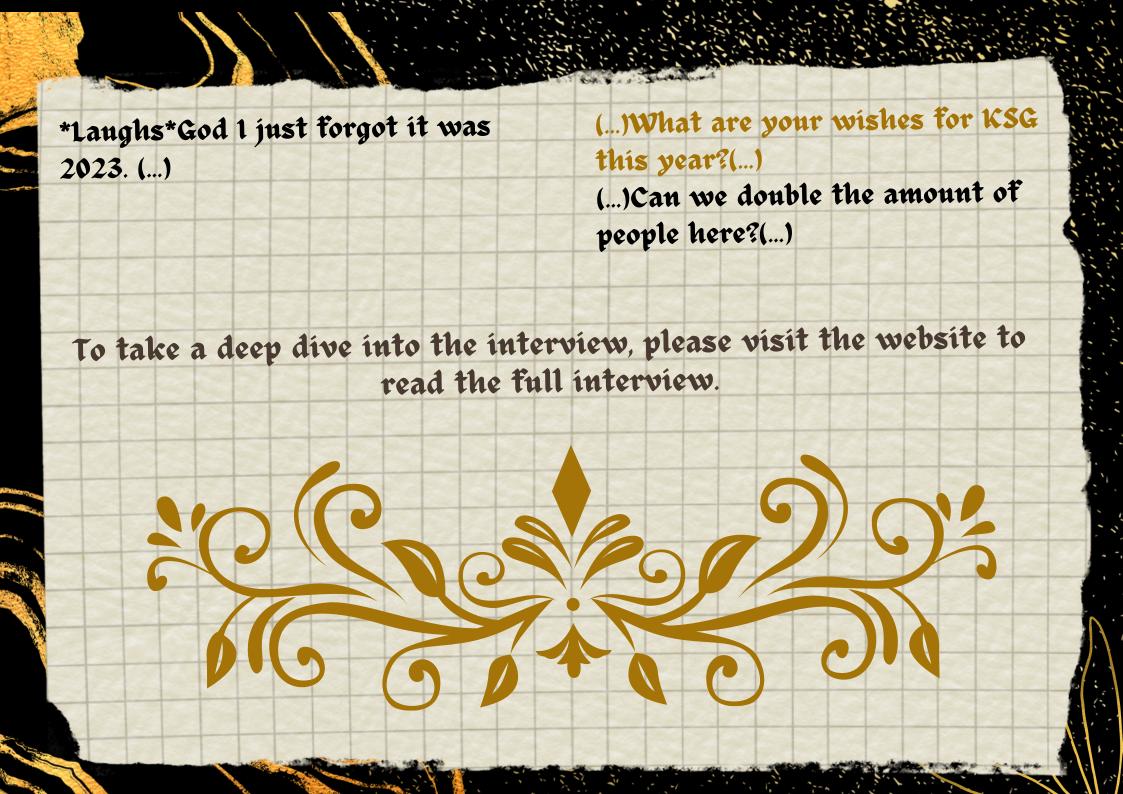

(...)The server is quite livelier now (...)

1 also think people missed being on the server after it went down for like two months.(...)

(...) Even though 1 wasn't sure if they were online till like oop, 1 was always just asking: "Hii, who is here?" (In a cute voice), and whoever just like answers laughs, 1 would be "oh, thank god, so you are available to do this and that." (in regular voice) (...)

(...)The day's meeting for the server reopening was a ball of anxiety.(...)

(...) Sneak peek on what's to come Can we ask how you came up with for ARMY KSG 2023? the role names? Maybe not even like 2023, maybe even earlier. If we get to think (...)That's where the SEA role and the about it a little more. Whalien role were birthed(...) Umm. it is 2023 right now.. OH, SHOOT! NO, 1 WAS (...)So I've noticed-blahblahblah-laughs I've asked the question, go ahead. 1 FORGOT laughs laughs more That slipped my mind. I'm dumb. (...)1'd like to thank Sas for the role Never mind, let's repeat this icon design(...) answer (...) And 1 tried for it about 278 times laughs laughs before 1 got it(...) That is going in. Oh my god, 278.(...)

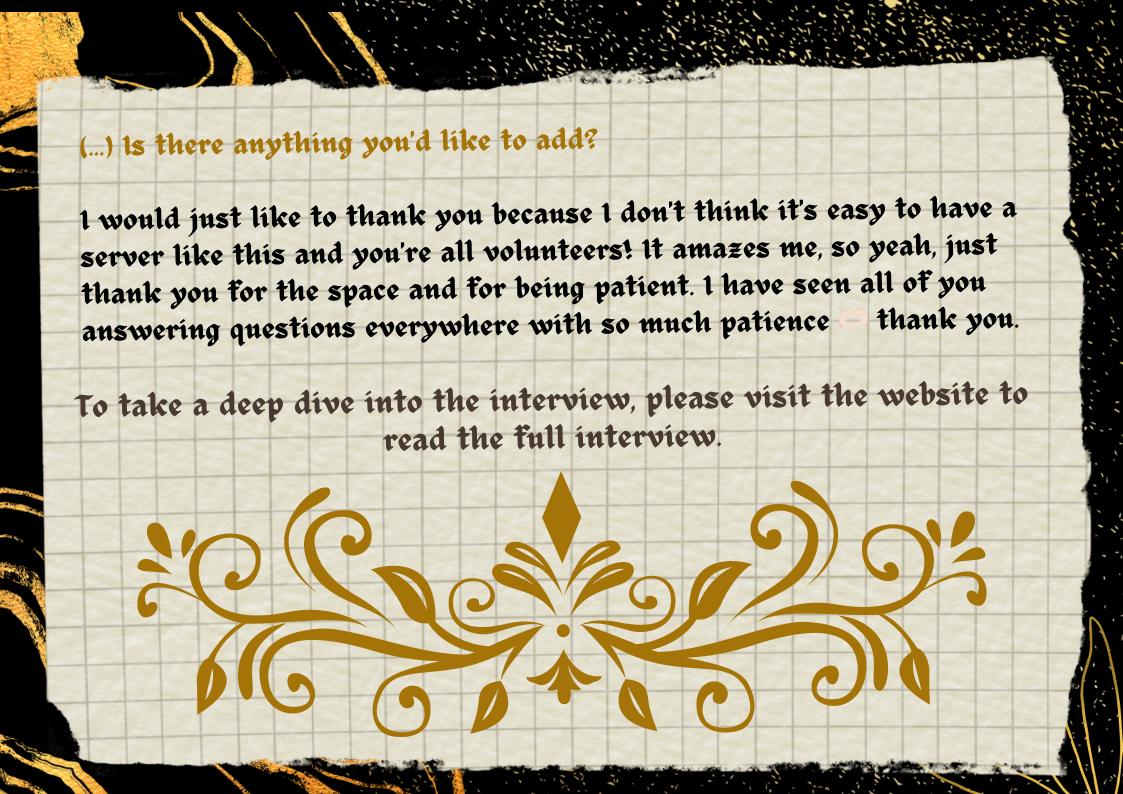

In this interview, Jullisa describes their experience, and gives their honest opinions on the changes and development of the server that began in December last year.

I'm sure you have noticed that everything is priced now, and the prices have also changed. It is a little bit more expensive. Have you saved enough hearts?

Ves, I noticed that. But I think it's good. The server has improved so much and like any other thing, prices should increase (and also, it's not real money, so y'all are actually giving so much to us) (...)

Regarding changes, you must have noticed the pinned messages, the FAQ channels, and the updated map channels. Do you think that what the staff has done has made it easier to navigate?

I think it has. If you're new, it gives you step by step on how to get roles and stuff, and the map gives you an overview of the channels, so you can know where to go (...)

Over the break, the O | KSG staff made significant changes to the server in an attempt to improve the entry process and overall server experience. Below you will find the major changes that were implemented and how they stand to benefit the members of the server.

Pinned Embeds

Each channel now has its own pinned embed explaining the channel's purpose and how to use the channel. Members can simply view the pinned messages in a channel to be up to date. Embeds were made with the use of webhooks. This also makes it easier for staff to update the embed as they can be updated by any organizer. Previously, messages were sent from each member. As such, only that member could update the message if there were any changes. With the transition to these embeds. process of updating has become much easier.

SUBJECT CHANNEL INSTRUCTIONS

- 1 Simply send your question to the channel. Be mindful of which channel you're posting in. If you are unsure of where to send your question, you may type in subjectqs in # &bot-spam3 for the list of examples.
- 2 A thread will automatically be generated for your message. This is where you will discuss your question with other members/mentors.
- 3 You may tag the @help me! role if the question is taking too long to answer. Please DON'T SPAM the ping, though.
- Archive the thread once you think your question has been successfully answered. If we don't see you responding in a long time, staff will archive the thread for you. Just feel free to reopen the thread when you have follow up questions.
- If you will be answering questions, please make sure to spread correct information! If you are answering something but are not entirely sure, please make sure to add disclaimers, or just leave it for other members to answer~

Based on the need of members, particularly newcomers, new channels were created in order to lessen the number of repeated questions while also making the onboarding process a bit easier.

One such channel is the FAQs channel. As the name suggests, it contains all the frequently asked questions about the server and the many different things it offers. Questions are divided into topics, which are sent in the form of embeds.

THE BASICS

What is a server point?

A server point is our way to keep track of how active our members are in our server. It also helps you be accountable for your learning.

In order to be counted as Active, you MUST gain two server points by the end of each month.

If you are a newcomer and are curious to know how you can begin with our activities/courses, you may view our [Newcomer Packages](message link) below.

Where do I ask my questions about...

The server? (eg. Quizbot isn't working, or how do i get rid of a warning?) you may post your questions in # {serverquestions-질문3 in both our servers and a mod will get to it whenever they can. To tag staff immediately for a quicker response, you may type in .serverhelp <Your message here> instead.

Korean? You can go to our subject channels for these. If you're unsure about which channel you should post, you can enter subjectqs in # Ebot-spam3 and choose the channel that aligns with your question the most.

THE STAFF

Below is only a general overview of the kinds of staff members in our server. You may view a more detailed breakdown of our roles in # Estaff-application 3.

★ Who is my Mentor?

Mentors are not assigned to members or groups, unless they are @Soundcheck Members. They are also learners, like you! You will generally get to interact with them in our subject channels, and live activities.

Should I reach out to mods or org staff regarding my question?
Mods - Generally, mods look over the server (maintain rules, give appropriate roles) so that it stays a healthy and safe space. Questions like navigation and role manipulation fall under the mods' bucket.

Org Staff - Orgs are ultimately in charge of the backend works in the server and making sure that everyone's submissions are being accounted for. Keeping track of member requests like excuse periods, warnings, fall under org staff's responsibilities.

If your question doesn't really fall under the above and are more about other members' recommendations, experiences in the server, etc. you may opt to reach out to your fellow server members through Q Ecircle-room-talk 3.

You may also go through # Estaff-introductions 3 to learn a little more about our staff members.

Another such channel is the KSG Packages channel. This channel acts as a guide for newcomers (and existing server members) who may be unsure of their next step after joining the server. It suggests courses, clubs, and activities one can join based on their level.

아미 KSG PACKAGES 🐞

Done with the tour? Unsure of where to go now? Then you've come to the right place! Since the server can be quite overwhelming at first, we've arranged a few sets of activities you can begin with, depending on your level.

First off, you can try customizing your profile even further by looking at our $# $ extraroles 3 and choosing the roles and pings that you would like. If you would like to explore on your own, the $# $ Emap- $$ Is also there to help you.

Now that you've done that, you may view our different packages according to levels by clicking the buttons below. ▼

With the addition of forums to Discord, of KSG followed suit and created a forum called "Circle Room Talk" for more organized discussion among server members. Tags include music, games, clubs, BTS, and Korean studies.

a 앞(카) Posted 16d ago Welcome to Circle Room Talk!

This is a space for more organized discussions instead of # Ebathroombreak 3. You can post anything in here (as long as it follows our server rules, of course), just don't forget to add a tag/s to it (you can add multiple tags, btw).
